Know Your Limits:

While sometimes difficult to do, it is important that you realize the limits of your own responsibility when assisting distressed students. If you are involved in an intervention with a student:
- It does not mean you must (or can) resolve the student’s difficulties.
- You are not responsible for the student’s emotional well-being.

Responding to distressed students can be emotionally challenging. It is important to obtain support for yourself from colleagues, partners, friends, or consultation with the USF Counseling Center staff.
Misconduct Issues

Recognize
Harassment:
- Phone calls, text messages or any type of communication continued after the person has been told to stop

Disorderly Conduct:
- Inappropriate outbursts or persistent interruptions
- Continued arguing beyond the scope of academic debate

Disruptive or Threatening Conduct:
- Throwing items in anger
- Refusing to leave classroom
- Refusing others the option to leave
- Brandishing a weapon

Respond
- Ask the student to meet with you outside the classroom
- Explain the impact of the behaviors on the class
- Express your concern for the student
- Help student explore options and alternatives and outline your expectations
- Threatening behaviors should not be tolerated and immediate action should be taken

Crime Victimization

Recognize
- Crying and/or running out of the classroom when sexual violence, domestic violence, stalking, or child abuse is the topic
- Sudden change in academic performance
- Visible bruises on face, throat, arms, or legs
- Sudden change in demeanor (for example, a formerly assertive student becomes withdrawn, or a formerly easy-going student appears angry all the time)
- Appears to be afraid of another student in the same class

Respond
- Listen to and believe what the student tells you.
- Do not ask for details of what happened.
- Do not minimize what happened
- Do not blame the student
- Say things like: “I’m glad you are safe now” and “I’m glad that you trusted me enough to tell me”
- Do not pressure the student to report the crime
- Do not make promises of anonymity or confidentiality
- Certain crimes must be reported by college officials, if they have knowledge of an alleged crime. This may be distressing to the student who disclosed to you. You should contact one of the following to assist the student and to help you determine if the situation must be reported: Victim Advocacy at (813) 974-5756, your supervisor, or Student Rights and Responsibilities at (813) 974-9443.
